

Equity Research Fellow—Research Project Submission

This application portion asks you to identify the equity research project that you would complete during the fellowship period. Before answering these questions, please refer to the Potential Research Projects document that outlines our priority equity research projects for AY2024-2025. Please answer to the best of your ability.

If you have decided to propose an alternative research project (ensuring it aligns with our priority equity goals described in the Potential Research Projects document), you may add a 2-page research proposal in addition to answering the questions below. Please be sure to include both the proposal and these questions in one document when submitting on the application portal.

Note: You do not need to submit an additional research proposal if you choose to complete one of our Potential Research Projects.

Question 1 (<500 words)

Please describe the project you would like to pursue as Feeding America's Equity Research Fellow (whether a project listed on the call for applications, an alteration, or another project). How does this research project align with your past/current scholarship? What areas of expertise do you have that will support the project? What scholarship/methods will be new to you?

Question 2 (<500 words)

Please briefly describe how you envision this project might impact your field of work. For example, how will it further scientific, policy, evaluation, or programmatic research? What potential gaps in your field's understanding will this project fill?

Question 3 (<250 words)

What questions about Feeding America's operations, data and/or the broader charitable food system do you need answered to complete this project? (We will discuss more at interviews, but knowing your questions will help us jumpstart supporting you throughout the process.)
